The University of Kentucky College of Education Counseling Psychology Program offers a master's degree and a Ph.D. Both are full time and provide face-to-face (rather than online) instruction, supervision, and mentoring. Our program aims to train counseling psychologists who are competent in providing professional psychological services that facilitate human well-being and the transformation of unhealthy and oppressive societal structures.

Master of Science

Our master's degree program will prepare you to apply to Ph.D. programs in counseling psychology! The University of Kentucky's Master of Science (M.S.) in Education:

- is a two-year, 48 credit-hour degree program;
- provides students with the comprehensive, foundational training specifically designed to prepare them to apply for Ph.D. programs in counseling psychology; and
- is a great fit for those who want to further explore the field of counseling psychology before committing to the 5+ years of training required to get a Ph.D. in this field.

Counseling Psychology Ph.D.

Our counseling psychology doctoral program is APA-accredited to train health service psychologists!

- Our doctoral program follows the Boulder model for preparing scientist-practitioners, with an emphasis on social justice issues.
- Our faculty members are outstanding and accomplished scientist-practitioners who are committed to providing excellent training and mentorship to the next generation of counseling psychologists.
