RE: Change in Kinesiology and Health Promotion M.S. – Adding Formalized Options

The Physical Education Teaching faculty is requesting to update our curriculum for our graduate students in order to formalize the option for emphasis in Physical Education Teaching. We currently have a general M.S. degree in Kinesiology and Health Promotion, but the different discipline options (emphasis areas) have not been formalized. It would also enable us to list Physical Education Teaching on the transcript as the degree conferred. Currently, the M.S. degree that our students complete is titled: Kinesiology and Health Promotion. These requested changes are specific to the Physical Education Teaching option only. While it may seem redundant to individuals not in these specialized areas, kinesiology and health promotion are two different fields and should not be considered one in the same, particularly considering the multitude of degrees offered within these areas and those seeking jobs within these specific areas. Our goal for conducting these revisions is to strengthen our students' marketability for career opportunities.

The table below outlines the current vs. new requirements for the proposed formalized option:
